WI High School has been a collaborative endeavor since the beginning. High school students from Willard Alternative High School in Missoula, MT worked as co-writers, idea developers, and lesson/activity experimenters. Their teachers, Steph Swing and Steve Mutchler let us into their classrooms for years and allowed us to join them in wilderness and wild places in every season. They have been, students and teachers alike, invaluable to the goal of creating something that would bring wilderness topics into high school classrooms across our nation.

Caitlyn Berkowitz, a graduate student at the University of Montana, has also been deeply involved in the development and genesis of WI High School. Her work with Willard students, time spent researching information, focused energy developing meaningful and interesting lessons, and general positive attitude have made partnering with her a personal pleasure and professional highlight.

The interagency staff (BLM, FWS, FS, NPS) and leadership at the Arthur Carhart National Wilderness Training Center (ACNWTC) have provided information, suggestions, encouragement and resources to allow this project to be a success.

From the Education and Outreach staff at the ACNWTC comes a heartfelt thank you to all of these amazing people and more. Wilderness, wild places, and education in and about them are better because of you.
