Wilderness . . .

—is managed to allow natural processes to operate freely.

—is a place where man is but a visitor.

—is not a place where your enjoyment or safety is guaranteed.

—is a place where group size should be limited, and activities non-impacting.

-has opportunities for solitude or primitive recreation.

-has outstanding natural, geological, or cultural values.

-prohibits motor vehicles, bicycles, motorized equipment, and timber harvesting.

-provides an opportunity to scientifically compare undisturbed areas with other management practices.

-perpetuates for future generations an enduring ecological resource.
